

Common Birds of The Brinton Museum and Bighorn Mountains Foothills

By Jacqueline L. Canterbury and Paul A. Johnsgard
Paperback, 67 pages, 3 illustrations, 48 color photographs

The information in this booklet is based in part on Birds and Birding in Wyoming's Bighorn Mountains Region (2013) by Canterbury, Johnsgard, and Downing. This book profiles 48 of the most abundant, typical, and interesting birds from the 114 species that have been regularly reported from The Brinton. The species accounts for each bird provide information on species identification followed by a brief guide for recognizing distinctive songs and calls. The status section provides information on the relative abundance and seasonal occurrence of a species. This is followed by a brief description of those habitats and environmental features that the species prefers. The calendar at the end of each species account shows the species' documented occurrences for every week of the year in the Brinton area and can be helpful as a predictive tool for judging the possibilities of a species' seasonal presence, both locally and regionally. Color photographs portray each species in their native habitat. The book also provides a brief history of The Brinton Museum, a description of its natural habitats and environments, and ends with a checklist of the 114 regularly occurring regional birds of The Brinton.
